“ Uncle Billy Joe will remain with me thru the many memories I have of him. He moved to the city soon after marriage in order to find work to care for his family. Most of those years he held down two jobs in order to provide for his family. He spoke often of "Mrs. Baird" the bread factory he worked at for so many years and mowing those city lawns . His work and his family were his life. I remember many visits he and his family made back to Arkansas to visit and stay in contact with his mom and dad. Never heard him complain that we seldom if ever made the effort to go see him in Texas. The long years of suffering and passing of his daughter Patty left a deep mark of sorrow upon his heart that he would carry till the end. I hope he and she are sitting on Heaven's porch, him with his cup of coffee, remembering the good times. He and I often discussed politics and doctors, no need to worry about those issues anymore for he has surpassed all that. Uncle Billy has reached that place where GOD is the leader in full charge and there is no need for doctors for there is no illness. I'll miss his visits, for he kept in contact with me during a time I desperately needed someone to talk to. He was a strong willed man but he had a gentle caring side if you took the time to get to know him. He kept in touch with his brother and sisters, visiting them when he could. Loved home cooked meals at Mrs. Nancy's, his favorite place to eat out. He loved his grandchildren and was proud of his son Lonny. Uncle Billy Joe Morgan.....Country boy at heart who braved the big city in order to carve out a better life for his family.

“ Mr. Joe was a wonderful friend to my father and the rest of the family. He faithfully visited my dad each week during his long illness. Mr. Joe put others before himself. He was very proud of his son, Lonny and daughter-in-law Tina. He talked about how good they were for each other. He could tell you the county road number to any road in Foreman. He visited the elderly and the sick, which is one of the great qualities about him.
