“ Uncle Billy Bob was the G.O.A.T. Back in the early 1980s, I swear he had a rotary phone in his truck that actually worked. You could actually call out on it, which was the coolest thing ever. That truck also had some seriously awesome rims. I have a faint memory of him climbing a telephone pole with his bare hands once...with no gear, just jorts and sunglasses.

After my grandpa passed away when I was ten, Uncle Billy Bob stepped in and became a father figure to me. I had some great summers with my cousins Amy, Brian, and Chris at their home. He was gracious in babysitting me all those times. He used to take me to Arkansas Traveler baseball games at Ray Winder Field when I was little. Those were some of my favorite memories growing up.

He built what I still think is the coolest log house ever constructed in Arkansas. It even had a stand alone icemaker, which still blows me away. "Close the icemaker Trav," I can still hear him saying.

And that handlebar goatee was legendary. I heard that Hulk Hogan saw it once and started wearing his facial hair the same way.

RIP Uncle Billy Bob

I remember the day you got off school bus & found your Grandpa & myself & daughter took you to Texarkana to find your Mom & Aunt Jean. But a memory of Billy Bob & Mike was Barbara & Myself were on the back of their dirt bikes going up that steep hill, ditch at the old homestead across the creek. I love you Travis & I know you were loved deeply by all! And your uncle is now in peace.
