“ Glenn was a dear friend. We met in high school at a Christian rock concert. He was a cheerleader and I was an officer in drill team. He cheered on the sidelines right in front of me. Then, life separated us for about 30 years. We reconnected and picked up as if time had stood still. Lots of laughs, some tears, and prayers often.

Knowing he used to volunteer at the Miss America pageants, we once watched it on TV while on the phone together (and yes, we picked the winner early on). He had me in stitches as he critiqued the contestants. Glenn had a unique gift of humor and anyone that crossed paths with him, had their day brightened with laughter.

He joined Facebook so I could share pictures from our school days with him. I teased him that I had never seen a "Friends list" grow so rapidly! He was loved by so many, which made it seem impossible to think that he could ever have even a twinge of self doubt, but I guess all of us do at times.

We had many conversations on faith during our friendship. I tried to impress on him just how much God loved him, valued him, and how that was what mattered most and should be our peace in how we see ourselves. Because he was a believer, I know I will see my dear friend again by the promise we are given through the Word of God. I am grateful God made us friends that loved, cared for, and prayed for each other. Always comfortable and truthful in our conversations. Thank you Glenn. Until we meet again.
