“ Grief sneaks up on you when you least expect it; the reflexive reach for the phone is a hard habit to break. Both happy and sad events can make you miss her. Every little thing reminds you of her, the things you did and the things you had yet to do. You grieve the relationship you lost and the one you had yet to build. The relationship was ended, and that cannot be fully appreciated by someone who has not experienced it.

judy, we have been friends for well over fifty years, best friends in the true sense of the word. thank you for that. i want to hold you in my arms to comfort you right now but cannot. but i can hold you in my heart!

“ We are so sorry to hear about Ms Pansy. She will be greatly missed by all who knew her. She was always a joy to be around. I loved going for drives in the country with her. She would point out where people lived and where things happened in the past. She knew everyone! She was mothers friend and side kick for so long . We loved her so.
