“ Bill and Virginia always treated me like a son instead of just a son-in-law who took their daughter away, and I appreciated being part of their family. Virginia was on my side from the start. She intervened with Bill when he wouldn't let Brenda date me way back in 1968. I hated to see her health failing in the last couple of years, but she was ready to go for a ride or to eat or take a trip any time we visited, which wasn't often enough. Every time she called she'd tell Brenda, tell Sherrel I'm ready to go eat breakfast. I'll miss those times. God rest you, Virginia, and say hello to Bill.
